Destructive Fire in Trigg.

The large four-story building, known as the "Wash Rickett's mansion," situated near Montgomery, Trigg county, was reduced to ashes at an early hour Tuesday morning. The property is owned by Mrs. Lula Shelby, who now lives in Princeton. Messrs. Jno. S. Gaines and Thos. Wilson were occupying a portion of the house at the time of the fire and their personal effects were also burned. The total loss will foot up about $8,000. There was a small insurance on the building, but nothing on the contents. The fire originated from a defective kitchen fan. The "Rickett's House" was one of the finest structures in that section of Trigg county.

Work on the Waterworks.

The waterworks plant is making good headway and getting things well under way. The engine house in now being covered and will be done this week. The dam has been completed some time. The stone foundation for the standpipe is nearing completion. The standpipe at the base will be 25 feet in diameter. It is located on the high hill in the grove adjacent to Gaines' colored church. Down in town the work of laying the pipes is nearly over. The workmen are now on Main street and have gone from Sixth street to Tenth street already, using the eastern side of the street. Pipes have been dropped several squares further on and the large pipes will all be under ground in a short while.

Change of Base.

HOWELL, Oct. 30.—Mr. Geo. H. Mayor has sold his original home place near Beverly containing 80 acres, to Mr. L. L. Leavelle, for $2,400. Mr. Mayor will move to Bell in a few days, where he and Mr. T. F. Glady have gone into the mercantile business.

Six Head of Horses Burned.

Child Scalded to Death.

A 5-year-old daughter of H. E. Foster, of near Clarksville, fell backward into a tub of boiling water Tuesday and was so horribly scalded that she died in a few minutes.

BOB AND ALF.

The Taylor Brothers at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"Bob" Taylor and his brother "Alf" appeared together at the Tabernacle last night and were greeted by a very large audience. The brothers are meeting at present on the same platform for the first time since they made their memorable race for the governorship of Tennessee, but this time the "war of the roses" is a peaceful war, from which one brother gets as much glory and as much profit as the other. Their dual production is entitled "Yankee Doodle and Dixie." Alf takes the Yankee and Bob the Dixie part of the performance.

"Every one, of course, remembers the race of the Taylor brothers against each other for the gubernatorial chair. It was in 1885 that the Tennessee Republicans nominated Alf Taylor as their candidate for governor and the Democrats saw them and went then one better as it proved, with Alf's brother Bob.

"The entertainment given by the Taylors is unique and as enjoyable as it is odd. It isn't a lecture, it isn't a series of character sketches, it isn't a rendition of folk-lore stories and songs in Southern dialect, it isn't a mere play of oratory and eloquence; yet it combines all these charmingly. There is music, mirth, pathos, poetry, folk-lore and fun blended into a well-rounded whole that interests while it elevates.

"Alf Taylor assumes the first part of the program. His theme is 'Yankee Doodle,' and from it he evolves a noble drama of liberty. He rapidly sketches the history of the American republic. The subjugation of the wilderness, the struggle with the throngs of the evolution of government are treated with liberal and graceful touch. Washington is the hero of the patriotic and largely allegorical play. He is enthroned as the archangel of liberty. The speaker tells with rare skill of the greatness of this nation.

"Yankee Doodle," from being a young national giant just awakened to a realization of his power, becomes the typical unit of strength—the Yankee as we see and know him. With this change comes a leap from the sublime to the ridiculous, and the audience is convulsed at the comic of a bloomer army returning victorious from the wars to lift for a moment the mind of the going man above pain and pane and the body.

Alf Taylor is a finished orator and his eloquent tributes to the great men of the republic who have risen from the ranks of labor to the most commanding eminence win warm applause. The liberty of speech, thought and labor, he maintains, were the spirit of 'Yankee Doodle,' and that spirit has created the grandest structure on earth in the government under which we live.

"Ex-Gov. 'Bob' Taylor is the defender and eulogist of Dixie. He says Mason and Dixon's line may not exist in law, but it does in fact and in sentiment, and ever will. 'It is the dividing line between cold bread and hot biscuits.' It is in the sentiment, and will remain as long as Yankee Doodle says 'You hadn't ought to do it,' and Dixie responds 'I done done it.' The war accentuated this line by placing Yankee Doodle on the pension roll and Dixie on crutches. He would despise the Northern man who would not respect his rocky hills the best the sun ever shone upon, he would have no respect for the Westerner who did not think his plains the prettiest and his mines the richest of the world; and he would not respect the Dixie man because it was his home, and because God made it the best. The crown of his talk is his picture of Southern life. At one point the speaker sketches the last of his family's slaves, an old negro man who had outlived his master and grown to love his master's children as his own. In a last interview he told his young master that the fiery chariot and its accompanying band of angels had twice been at his bedside and, as he longed to be with his friends, if the good old days it would not be many days before it would come and take him. The young man saw the faithful dirker stay in death, and as he said it he broke into a happy, happy melody, 'Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.' The entertainment is full of south touches.

Tax Receipts Heavy.

City-Tax collector Cravens has been rushed with business all this week by taxpayers anxious to avoid the penalty added to tax. The receipts Wednesday were $3,200 and yesterday they were expected to be still larger at the close of business hours.

Coleman Phelps Will Hang.

Gov. Brown has fixed Thursday, Nov. 8, as the day on which Coleman Phelps, convicted of murder at Bowling Green, will be hanged. The case has been taken through all the courts, the verdict in the lower court being sustained each time.

At Neagunee, Mich., ten inches of snow fell Tuesday. Sleighs were in use for the first time this season in that country.

THE EARTH QUAKED.

A VIOLENT SEISMIC DISTURBANCE YESTERDAY MORNING.

Two Distinct Shocks at 5:15 O'clock—Buildings Shaken and People Aroused From Their Slumbers.

Two distinct and violent shocks of earthquake were felt here and all over this section at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning.

It was the most violent disturbance of the kind felt here within the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

The first shock was felt with such force that buildings swayed, windows rattled and people were aroused from sound slumber. It was accompanied by a low rumbling sound. The second shock followed immediately and was more violent than the first.

Many persons were badly frightened and rushed from their rooms. The shock soon passed away, though, and was not followed by any further shake-up. The whole disturbance occupied not more than a minute.

At Bethel Female College the young ladies in the upper stories were badly frightened and rushed wildly about the halls.

At South Kentucky college the shock was felt with great force. All over the city people were awakened, but so far as heard from the only incident worthy of mention was that some plastering was shaken off the ceiling in J. A. Henderson's bed room.

Dave Wiley says it shook him out of bed, but "scared" should probably be substituted for "shook." Only two or three people have been found in the city who slept through it all.

At Caskey Dr. P. S. Anderson's chimney was cracked from bottom to top.

The shock was felt at Cadiz, Pembroke and other neighboring towns, about the same here.

At Evansville it was even more distinct, but no harm was done. Outside points had not been heard from when our forms were locked.

The Latest From Calhoun.

MURRAY, Ky., Oct. 31.—In the judge's race, matters look more hopeful than yet reported. John Hendrick and Ollie James have done some effective work here for Linn. Hendrick is still stumping the county in the interest of Linn and the ticket entire. He is doing great good and Linn's majority will be greatly increased by Hendrick's prevalence and his majority may now be put at anywhere between 700 and 1100 in Calhoun.

Boyd And Price Held Over.

The examining trial of Sam Boyd and Joe Price, the negroes charged with the murder of Lewis Watkins, was held before Judge Breathitt Wednesday, and resulted in both defendants being held over to answer any indictment that might be found against them when the next grand jury meets. Their bonds were fixed at $250. They were unable to furnish them and were taken back to jail where they will remain until next March.

To Vote In December.

The Wet side anticipated the Dry in calling the election on prohibition for the city only. A petition has been filed for the four city precincts signed by 25 per cent. of the voters, calling for an election Dec. 27.

The election will be held separate from the proposed county vote, and it is said the county vote will now be abandoned, as there are only six saloons outside of Hopkinsville.

Good Work Among Convicts.

Over 100 convicts are now members of the Christian Endeavor society, which was organized at the Edgelyville penitentiary a few weeks ago. A Paducah delegation visited the prison last Sunday and held services inside the walls.

No Sales This Week.

Several members of the Tobacco Board are absent this week and it was decided to have no sales until next week. Receipts are light, as no new tobacco has yet been delivered. There is very little being done in the loose market.

The grading on the railroad from Empire to the new coal mine near that place has been finished and the work of track laying will be done next week. The shaft work at the mine is also being rapidly pushed and coal from this mine will likely be put on the market in a few weeks.

The fall term of Circuit Court ends to-morrow. The week has been consumed in the disposition of civil matters. Much business has been transacted during this term and the docket is well up.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL REGISTRATION.

Democrats More than Hold their Own—The Final Figures.

The registration at the clerk's office three days of this week resulted in the addition of 105 names to the city lists. Of these 57 were Democrats and 48 Republicans. The whites were 64 and the colored voters 41, distributed as follows:

POLITICAL COMPLEXION BY WARD.

WEST DUKE.—Dr. P. E. West, of Ferguson, Logan county, and Miss Ethel Duke, of near this city, were married Wednesday Oct. 31, at 3 p. m., at Hebron church, by Rev. T. V. Joiner, assisted by Rev. H. C. Suttle. Mr. Henry Ferguson and Miss Mattie Duke were the attendants and Messrs. R. C. West and Chas. Duke acted as ushers. The wedding march was played by Miss Follenbush, of Bethel Female College. The church was beautifully decorated with many colored autumn leaves, evergreens and flowers. Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. West left on the 5:30 train for their home in Logan county.

The bride is a lady of many accomplishments and is universally popular with all who know her, and the groom is very fortunate in securing such a partner out of the matrimonial lottery. Dr. West is a young physician of much promise and is already enjoying a lucrative business in his chosen profession. He is a Christian county boy and is a brother of Mr. Jas. West, of the tobacco firm of Messrs. West & Sons. The KENTUCKIAN extends the usual congratulations.

SMITH-WHITE.—Mr. Geo. L. Smith, a prominent druggist of Cadiz, was married Tuesday Oct. 25th to Miss Nellie White, daughter of Mr. W. C. White, one of Trigg county's wealthiest citizens. The marriage took place at the bride's father and was unusually pretentious. There were four bridesmaids, Misses Josie White, Garvie Rawlins, Var. Wilkinson and Pearl Rymann. The handsome parlors were tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. The bride couple came to this city the same day and took the evening train for Atlanta, to be gone a week or ten days visiting the Evans family.

The young couple are prominent and popular in the best social circles of Trigg county, and many friends will wish them a happy future.

The bride couple received numerous handsome and costly wedding presents.

FORGY-TWIDWELL.—Mr. S. Walcott Forgy and Miss Elizabeth Twidwell, of Clinton, were married at the Arlington Hotel in Louisville, Tuesday night. They returned to Elkton the following morning. The wedding was conducted so quietly that they were back home before anybody knew they were away. Mr. Forgy was a young widower, his first wife having been a daughter of Judge H. C. Peetre. He is now a practicing attorney at Elkton and has attained success and prominence in his profession. His bride is not known in this city, but is said to be a young lady of many accomplishments and of social prominence.

WATTS PRAY.—Dr. H. H. Watts, of Bolivar, and Miss Annie Peay, of Bell, were married Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Cheek officiating. The ceremony was performed in Salem church. After the marriage the happy couple, accompanied by a few friends, were driven to the residence of Esq. Austin L. Peay, father of the bride, where an elegant reception was held.

Dr. Watts is a prominent young physician and is exceedingly popular here. His bride is a young lady of much beauty and rare accomplishments and is a great favorite in Bell society.

ALLEN-BRAME.—Mr. J. W. Allen and Miss Lizzie Brame, of Lafayette, were married at the Arlington Hotel, Clarksville, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. A. B. Boone. They were attended by Edwin Gardner and Miss Addie B. White, both of Lafayette.

A Woman's Story.

A NARRATIVE OF WOMAN'S ILLS.

Right Living and Lack of Out-Door Exercise Bring Much Woe.

(From the Detroit News.)

The large, pretentious, red-roofed at 185 Miami avenue, in this city, is the home of the heroine of this interesting story. She is Miss Margaret Stoughton, and her experience during the past four years are published here for the first time.

Miss Stoughton is a pretty girl of about 30 years and is today the true picture of the ideal, healthy, robust and jovial American girl. She was not always so, as is proven by the accompanying statement made by her.

"Four years ago," she said, "I was such a nervous, puny little maid, pale and emaciated by an illness peculiar to me, women, that my father and mother gave me up to die. The local physicians, whom I consulted, were Dr. Glasford. (I was at that time living at Roseland, Ont.) said it was only a matter of days when I would be laid away in the churchyard. 'I could not walk. I became so weak, and regularly every night my father had to carry me up stairs to my room. I can distinctly remember my telling him that he would have to carry me about much longer, and how he said, while the tears glistened in his eyes, that he would be willing to do it all day, if he could only have me with him.'"

"At this time, I read, or was told by somebody, of the wonderful cures that were being wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and my father went to Boston, where he purchased a couple of boxes from W. Wallace. I commenced taking them, and I thought that they did me no good, but very shortly I noticed a great change. They began to act on my trouble, and in the short space of six weeks I was able to walk. I continued taking the pills, and in six months I was able to do anything I saw me do. I fully believe that they alone saved me from the grave, and you will always find myself and the balance of my family ready to talk about the good Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 10th day of December, 1905.

D. A. DELANEY, Notary Public.

Wayne Co., Michigan.

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unending supply of French disease in localities, motor acids, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuritis, rheumatism, nervous headache, the pain of the heart, pale and yellow complexion, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and the general result from vitiated humors in the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will build up the system and be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50; they are never sold in bulk at a lower price. Address Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockton, N. Y.

Waiting Developments.

Johnny had been out in the yard playing with his ball, and suddenly came in and sat down to read.

His father looked up, and seeing that Johnnie had his Sunday school book in his hand, thought it time to question him.

"What did you do with the ball?"

"It went over the wall into Mr. Brown's yard."

"Did you go after it?"

"No, pa."

"Why not?"

"Because it went through the window," Pearson's.

Clerical Wit.

The witty bishop of Oxford was once waited on by a clergyman who came to lodge a complaint against a brother cleric, whom he accused of ritualistic practices.

"For instance," said the aggrieved clergyman, "your lordship once stole it right for a priest to kiss a stole?"

"Well," replied Dr. Stubbs, very gravely, "I think that would be a good ground for complaint if he stole a kiss."

How We Keep Cool.

Nearly two hundred million fans have been sold during the past year in the United States. These fans include both the imported and domestic manufacture, but the bulk of this immense number came from China and Japan.

Few fans are made in the United States, and the greater part of the home production is of the very cheapest kind and used mostly for advertising purposes.

Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, Will Play Quite a Part When Congress Assembles—Other Popular Members of the Senate.

Special Washington Letter.

Senator John H. Mitchell, of Oregon, will occupy a commanding position in the senate during the Fifty-fourth congress, which is soon to convene. He is a member of the republican side of the committee on claims, and also on the committee on privileges and elections. He can be chairman of either of these committees, just as he can be chairman of the judiciary, post offices and post roads and transportation committee. leading senators are now considering a practical solution of the financial problem, covering bimetalism in a manner which will seem to be more satisfactory than anything heretofore offered in that direction.

Senator Henry M. Teller, of Colorado has been continuously in public life since December 4, 1878, when he took office as a senator from the new state of Colorado. During the years 1882, 1883 and 1884 he was secretary of the interior. While holding that office he was again elected to the senate, and has remained a member of that august body, always holding high rank in leadership. He is regarded as one of the most reliable and conscientious counselors on the republican side of the senate, and his advice is always sought by his colleagues before any steps are taken in matters of important legislation. He is not given much to speaking, but is known to be one of the ablest orators in the senate or in the country. He is regarded as a man of strict integrity, honorable and upright in every thought as well as every deed. For many years he has been one of the most champions of the principle of free coinage of silver. In season and out of season, at all times and upon every occasion, he has advocated this doctrine. His attitude has had much to do with creating and fostering the sentiment in favor of free coinage which has recently become so prevalent throughout the country. He is a statesman of the old school and his views command respect, primarily because they are Senator Teller's views; and everybody knows him to be a safe man in political and legislative councils. He has all ways been a republican and has never swerved from his party because of his advocacy of silver. Other republican senators have done so without thereby aiding the cause of silver.

Senator J. C. S. Blackburn, of Kentucky, who is now making the fight of his life for reelection to the senate, is one of the great men of this age; and, no matter whether or not he shall be reelected to the senate, he will command attention of the country during the Fifty-fourth congress. He is a magnetic orator, and a man whom everybody must like after once clasp hands with him. He has taken advanced ground for the free coinage of silver; and on that account his party appears to be split into Blackburn and anti-Blackburn factions. There is no more popular man in Kentucky than Blackburn, and yet he is fighting hard for his position. Ordinarily he would be easily reelected, but this silver problem has knocked political calculations into smithereens in Kentucky, and hence the senator must be alert and active day and night until the contest is concluded. He is the only man on the republican side of the senate who has matched Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, in debate. On one occasion he fairly fayed Ingalls alive, and while he was speaking in his most effective manner, Senator Vance, of North Carolina, who was always a wit, called to Blackburn: "Say, Jo, save me a piece of the hide."

Senator William Call of Florida, is one of the strongest men ever sent to the senate from any state. He is a very quiet, unpretentious gentleman, but an enormous resistor, a deep thinker and a magnetic orator. He is well posted on all current events, and speaks with deliberation and earnestness, always commanding the attention and respect of his colleagues. No matter what subject may come before the senate for consideration, Senator Call appears to be able to enter upon its discussion with a manifest understanding and appreciation of the matter in general and in detail. He has read so many books, upon so many subjects, and his memory is so clear and active, that he is probably one of the most ready debaters in the congress, and one of the most instructive as well as entertaining speakers. He is a working senator, as will be seen by the fact that he is a member of six important committees—appropriations, fisheries, mines and mining, revision of the laws, territories and chairman of the committee on patents. You may well believe that a man who attends to his duties on all of those committees is a busy man and a working statesman.

Senator Jacob H. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, is one of the men of whom you will hear during the deliberations of the Fifty-fourth congress. He succeeded Henry W. Blair, author of the Blair educational bill. He had formerly been a member of the house of representatives and is an experienced legislator. He is a very strong partisan, but personally popular even with senators on the other side of the senate chamber. He will chair the man of the committee on manufactures. He is also a member of the committees on pensions, District of Columbia, education and territories. You will often hear of him during the next long session of congress. He is about five feet six inches tall, bald headed, with a big mustache, heavy eye brows and strong chin. He is agile and nervous in action and speech, and withal, a good story teller and a popular gentleman.

VARINA ANNE DAVIS.

Known in the South as "Daughter of the Confederacy."

Her Experiences During the War in the Prison Cell of Her Father—Educated with Care in Europe—Success as a Writer.

If anyone should ask Miss Varina Anne Jefferson Davis for the story of her life she would reply in the language of the needy knife-grinder: "Story! Bless you, I've none to tell!" This would be quite true so far as her own recollection goes, but at the time of her life of which she knows nothing but by hearsay she had some thrilling experiences.

"Winnie Davis," as she is always called, was born in the executive mansion at Richmond, Va., at the close of the war in June, 1864, I believe—and when she was in long clothes she was sharing her father's prison cell with him. She had her experiences of war before that, for she took part in the retreat from Richmond, jolting along for hundreds of miles in an ambulance. Even at that early stage of her career she showed that she was worthy to be a soldier's daughter; for, according to her mother, who ought to know, she never fretted or was cross, and if the ambulance gave a particularly hard bounce over the rough roads her baby cheeks would flush with pain, but she kept her tears back for more trying occasions.

Her father had been at Fortress Monroe for a year when Mrs. Davis and Winnie joined him. The other children, being older, were left in Canada with their grandmother. Winnie was still a babe in arms; all day long she would play contentedly in her father's prison room. She was much petted by the officers and their wives, but she preferred to be with her father in his cramped quarters rather than to enjoy the freedom that he could not share.

The first five years of the little Winnie's life were spent in England; then she was brought back to Memphis, Tenn. At an unusually early age she showed a taste for reading, and her parents directed her young mind through the fields where the best literature that he could not share.

MAN OF MANY PARTS.

William Morris, who says he has been spoken of lately in connection with the post of poet laureate. It is because he is so many-sided a man that he is known neither by his countrymen nor by Americans. If he were only a mere poet it would be easy to write of him—to make an estimate and properly classify him—but he is a larger figure in life than he is in literature, and he therefore belongs to the future rather than to the present in the way of criticism.

He is spoken of indiscriminately as a socialist, as a designer of furniture and wall paper, and a poet. At Kelmscott house, Hammermith, he designs aesthetic wall papers for which he is deservedly famous, and the Kelmscott Press, which he conducts, is noted for the beautiful books which it produces. Though he seems to be set nowadays on winning laurels as a designer and publisher, William Morris has a long and brilliant record as a poet. His first book of verse: "The Defense of Guinevere and Other Poems," was published as far back as 1895. It was followed by "The Life and Death of Jason," which put him in the first rank of living poets. In his next work: "The Earthly Paradise," he well-nigh exhausted the treasures of Greek mythology and Gothic folklore. This is a work with a plan which is somewhat indebted to that of the "Canterbury Tales."

Certain gentlemen and mariners of Norway sail in quest of "the earthly paradise"—an island of bliss—It, and remain in it for the remainder of their lives, passing the time with tales from Greek and Teutonic sources. The poem is not meant to incite vigor or active effort (though these may find their remote position in the tales); the primary conception implies a caste of indolence, an existence conditioned by languid repose. The poet does not fume and fret, but he has hopes that when there is leisure he may be thought worthy of some attention:

But rather was weary of your mirth
From full hearts still unsatisfied yet sigh,
And feeling kindly unto all the earth
Grieve every minute as it passes by.
Made the more mindful as the sweet days die.

Remember me a little then, I pray,
The fisher of an empty day.
The critics of Mr. William Morris have complained of late that he has wasted too much time over the translation of Icelandic Sagas. But, as before stated, he is far greater as a man than as a poet. At Merton Abbey in Surrey he has run for some years a factory in which by producing artistic wall paper, furniture, etc., he has tried to restore the dignity of art to ordinary household decoration. He has fought that curse of the whole Philistine world, cheap art and stupid bric-a-brac. His fundamental principle was thus expressed in one of his lectures: "I do not want art for the few any more than education for the few or freedom for the few."

wati, and he is about sixty-five years old. He lives near the Monkey temple, in a garden belonging to a rajah, wears no clothing, sleeps on the ground and accepts no gratuities, because he wants nothing. "By much study and long contemplation of religion," it has been said, "he claims to be free from all passions—free even from the very wants of life." He has a face full of mystery and kindness. He discusses and explains his ideas of religion whenever a visitor desires to hear him, and he treats every one of the multitude who call upon him with constant and most cordial kindness. Part of his writings has been published in a bulky volume.

For twelve years Mr. Hardin was Attorney General for the State of Kentucky, and the fierce Republican search light that has been turned for the past year upon his public, professional and personal record has revealed no blot, blur or blemish thereon. For twenty years his voice has been heard all over Kentucky in praise of the principles of Democracy, but during all this campaign now drawing to a close not one word has he uttered against Democrats who have so bitterly assailed him. Having his quarrel with Republicans only, he was wisely refrained from answering "Mod Democrats" according to their folly, but pursued the even tenor of his way toward the Executive mansion which he will occupy on December 10. The Times is not in accord with Gen. Hardin's currency views, but knowing that he will have no material influence upon the final settlement of that vexed national question, and believing that he will honestly, consistently and ably discharge every duty that devolves upon the Chief Executive of the State, we hail with unassumed and unalloyed pleasure the growing assurances of his triumphant election.

If you are a city voter you must not only vote early but often. You are entitled to two votes and must not overlook either of them. One will be the state ticket and the other for councilman. You will be given two separate ballots and must stamp them both and they will be put in different boxes.

If you put off voting until after dinner you may find a crowd ahead of you at the closing hour and get shut out. The polls close at four o'clock, no matter if a hundred men are at the polls waiting to vote. Vote early.

The close of the campaign finds the Democrats more confident than any time since the nomination and everything now points to a victory for the whole ticket. Money is talking that way and no even bet is being placed on Bradley.

One of Bill Bradley's votes for negro was against a white G. A. R. veteran of Garrard county and at one of Gen. Hardin's speaking the other day he scored a big point by producing the man and having him get up in the stand and make a statement.

The proposed prize fight did not come off at Hot Springs yesterday. Gov. Clarke sent troops to see that the meeting did not take place. Fitzsimmons was arrested and Corbett sought a hiding place.

Another of those periodical crises in French politics is reported and most of the Paris newspapers seem to think M. Bourgeois is about the right type of a man to form the next new cabinet.

The earthquake was nothing to the shaking up we are going to give the Bradleyites next Tuesday.

Cuban patriots licked the Spanish in a pitched battle last week and killed 800 of them. It was the most decisive victory yet won on either side.

Dr. Clardy will make two speeches in this county next Monday. He will speak at the Court house at 1 o'clock p. m. and at Pembroke at night.

Kentucky is the only State that has never had a Republican governor. Will Democrats help to wrest this honor from her? We think not.

After the election next Tuesday we will have a good rain. It always rains after a Democratic victory.

Come on boys and let's carry Hopkinsville for the whole ticket, and show them what we can do when we try.

Gov. Brown came home to Henderson this week to register and will return next week to put his cross under the rooster's feet.

Vote it straight from Hardin to Linn.

Don't forget to vote for Councilman.

Secretary Carlisle registered as a Democrat at Covington Wednesday.

FASCINATING GOLF.

Do you play golf? If you do, you are bound to be an enthusiast or nothing, and never tire of listening to tales of prowess on the "green." That is a charming and health-giving game, no one can deny; and after reading the handsomely illustrated article, "Fascinating Golf," in Democrat's Magazine for November, one can understand something of the enthusiasm it arouses, and the fascinations it exercises over its devotees. Another article of interest to all women is "Woman Guardians of Patriotism," which gives many interesting facts about the Daughters of the American Revolution which have never before been published, and the illustrations include portraits of the officers of the national organization, and most of the state regents. Democrat's is published for $2.00 a year by the Democrat Publishing Co., 110 Fifth Avenue, New York.

ATE SIXTY-FIVE DUCKS.

Gastronomic Feat of a Reptile Near Brooklyn, N. Y.

For some time past Thomas Moon, a truck farmer living near Brooklyn, has been missing each day a number of young ducks. They disappeared so mysteriously that their loss could not be accounted for in any manner. All theories as to how they were taken were smashed to pieces when it was known that no one had been near the place during the day where the ducks were wont to pass away the time. No feathers or other residue could be found, which would undoubtedly have been the case if the fowls had been made away with by a hawk or some "varmint."

When sixty-five of the fluffy youngsters had disappeared Moon determined to watch the ducks for a day. He followed them down in the field to the little branch where they slipped into the water. No sooner had they arrived there than a shadow came from the bushes and a snake as Moon had never seen before outside of a show. He is not a drinking man and is not accustomed to see such things in broad daylight, but he had to pinch himself to make certain that he was in his right senses. While his eyes stuck out at his head in terror the monster snake glided up to the ducks, when they all set up a terrific quacking, as if they knew the end of the world was coming for some of them.

By this time the man had recovered himself, and, hastily running to the bushes, cleared away the reptile and returned to where he had seen the snake.

When he reached there he found the snake, which seemed fifteen feet long and one foot thick, making off with a duck in its mouth. Moon pulled the trigger of his gun. When the smoke cleared away the reptile was stretched out, lashing its tail in fury. Moon kept away until its struggles had ceased, and approached it. He found out it was a moccasin, and when measured it was as long as a fence rail, about nine feet four inches. —Baltimore Herald.

CRIMPS AN AID TO REFORM.

Mirrors for Girls' Bedrooms in Connecticut's Industrial School.

As the crowning idea in experiments to decide whether girls can be most successfully reformed with or without crimps and other trifling adornments dear to feminine vanity, one hundred looking-glasses are to be placed in the bedrooms of inmates of Russell home at the Middletown Industrial school in Connecticut.

All of reform schools for girls maintain that if it were not for the love of crimps, jewelry, ribbons and the determination to procure articles for personal adornment at any cost, the number of girls supported by the public purse in industrial and reform institutions would be greatly diminished.

So it has been customary for years to frame stringent rules against crimps, hair ribbons, corsets, paint, powder and style. Mirrors are regarded as prime cultivators of vanity and enemies of reformation.

Concomitant. It is conceded, has a model institution in the industrial school at Middletown. It is about two years since Superintendent Fairbanks took charge and made a revolution in favor of crimps and everything, except paint and powder, that a girl needs to make herself look pretty. It is an experiment that is being watched by similar articles all over the country.

Superintendents of many similar institutions from different parts of the country visited Middletown during the recent national convention in New Haven. Most of them have not yet recovered from the amazement at the sight of over two hundred girls with hair crimped or waved, fashionably arranged in Psyche knots and decorated with fancy pins of gilt, silver and shell; young girls with curls down their backs, knotted with bright ribbons, stylish frocks trimmed with lace the latest designs, made after the reigning styles and with sleeves as voluminous as any to be seen at the most fashionable summer resort. —N. Y. World.

It is interesting how strong the influence of a face is. A friend of Mary Mapes Dodge, who had occasion one day to go with her into a private room in her charming apartment in Forty-eighth street, New York, stopped for a moment by the door to examine a large framed photograph hanging on the wall. It was a very beautifully finished head of Emerson.

Mrs. Dodge turned back and exclaimed: "You are admiring my Emerson!" It is one of the dearest things I possess, and I tell me everywhere, though I do not often carry about his essays. The face is constant enough help."

She—You viper!
He (graciously)—You snake charming! —H Gazette.

A BOOTBLACK'S LUCK.

He is Rescued from Suicide and Given a Boost.

The days at Sistersville, W. Va., have been cold and cheerless, and the streets not the sort that induce the average oil operator to have his shoes shined. All of one day and at night George McClung, a one-legged boy who runs a shining stand in front of the Manhattan cafe, used his best arts to beguile some passer-by into his chair. When the day was done, he had just earned twenty cents. The boy was desperate, so he tied his jaw up in his kerchief, and went to a drug store to buy laudanum to ease the pain of an imaginary aching tooth. Capt. Reedy, the city marshal, was in a rear room of the drug store when the boy got the laudanum, and decided to follow him. McClung took to the back streets and entered the boiler shed of an abandoned oil well derrick, which had served him as a sleeping place during summer, but which now is very uncomfortable. The marshal was in time to see the boy put the laudanum in his lips, but it was too late to pull the cork with his teeth, so he might reach the fluid. Capt. Reedy seized the bottle and broke it. He then took the boy to the police station and furnished him a comfortable bed, having made him promise not to try again to kill himself.

The next morning the captain found the boy's trouble about the town and by eight o'clock there was a crowd waiting about the shiner's stand. The sympathies of the oil men were roused by the story of the boy's troubles, and they were there in force. All day the crowd kept up, and when the boy closed his stand, the night nearly worked to death, he had earned over twenty-five dollars. Some of the oil men had their shoes shined five times, at fifty cents a shine, and others just dropped the money into the boy's pocket without wasting time to have him "foot with their Tribbles," as one of them put it.

Having the shoes shined by the "oneleg" for luck has come to be the fad in Sistersville, and from this time on there need be no desire on McClung's part to kill himself unless his wealth turns his head. —Philadelphia Press.

They Bag One of Seven Hundred and Twenty Bears in Oregon.

C. E. Tebb and Hayden Jones, the artists, came into town from southwestern Oregon loaded with a sack containing the skin of a black bear, an animal which in life weighed seven hundred and twenty pounds and measured seven and one-half feet in length.

The animal was run across just as the party were leaving their camp, about forty miles from Kerby, for home. They had gone four or five miles when a shepherd dog which accompanied them started the big fellow out of the brush. The bear's dimensions were so enormous that he made an easy target. Jones fired first and lodged a ball in his head. This, however, had no effect, and the great bear ran down the gulch, followed by the men and the dog. The latter was so hot in the pursuit that the bear turned on him and attempted to deal him a blow, but missed, and fell thirty feet down the ravine to the bushes, where he regained his feet.

Tebbs and Jones followed as rapidly as the nature of the ground would permit. The bear turned up the opposite side of the mountain, the dog after him, when Jones fired and lodged the animal near the eye, and then Tebb lodged a ball in the black and fleecy mass near the head. He dropped, but arose again. Before he could get away, however, the hunters sent five more shots into the body and brim gave up the ghost. They then returned to camp, and getting a horse and placing the carcass in the fork of a felled tree, dragged it with much difficulty five miles distant. There the bear was weighed, measured and skinned. The meat was given to the miners and the hunters again started for home. —San Francisco Chronicle.

Carrier Pigeons on Vessels.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hill's Catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. William O. Grover, widely known as the inventor of the Grover & Baker sewing machine, has just died in Beverly, Mass., at the age of seventy-two years. He made a fortune out of his invention while still a young man and at once retired from business, devoting his time to religious and philanthropic activities.

Mr. Horace Bradley, chief of the Department of Fine Arts, spent two months in Europe and brought back with him a collection that has surprised everybody. Mr. Bradley's experience as superintendent of the art department for the Harper Bros., of New York, was an immense advantage, and his connection there had put him in touch with eminent artists in Europe. He was able to make engagements with a number of them even before he went over, and after a few months in London, Paris, Brussels and other European capitals, he had secured one of the finest collections of European paintings ever brought to America. Indeed, he confidently asserted that his exhibit, while not as large as the one at Chicago, will compare favorably in merit with any ever gotten together in this country. The pictures are now being put on the walls, and a close glance at some of the more notable ones confirms what Mr. Bradley says. There will be notable pictures from famous artists in this country, in the Northern, Western and Southern States. Mr. Bradley has taken great pains to encounter the South by giving good position to Southern pictures where he could find them, but he has mercilessly excluded work of indifferent character, and in this particular his exhibit will probably excel anything. He has so carefully kept out the commonplace that his display has the appearance of a collection of masterpieces.

HYPNOTISM, OR WHAT?

Miss Besie's Singular Experience in Church.

Church music has a strange effect upon the sensibilities of Miss Besie Ayres, of Evanson. During the Sunday service at the First Congregational church in that suburb Miss Ayres was completely hypnotized by the strains of the organ, and she finally went into a hypnotic trance, from which she was resuscitated with difficulty. Miss Ayres was sitting in the center of the church, and her peculiar actions created the greatest excitement.

As soon as the strains of the organ were heard, those sitting near Miss Ayres noticed that she half rose in her seat, as if to change her position. Then she seemed to think better of it and sat down again. In a moment those in the same pew noticed that her fingers were twitching nervously, and that her face had become so red as to be nearly purple. A lady sitting in a pew behind asked Miss Ayres if she could give her any assistance. She turned to reply to the well-meant inquiry, but no words came from her lips. She seemed to be making a desperate struggle with some emotion, and her whole body was now twitching.

Suddenly the blood left Miss Ayres' face as it had come and left her pale as death. She made an attempt to rise, staggered, tried to catch herself on the pew in front, and fell headlong into the aisle, startling everyone on that side of the church. An usher at once rushed to her assistance. He attempted to raise her to her feet, but she had stiffened until every muscle seemed strained to the highest tension. Her eyes were wide open, with a fixed and glassy stare, and those around for a moment feared that she had been the victim of a sudden attack of epilepsy. The music was carried out of the audience room to the open air, where it was thought she would at once recover, but she was still as insensible as when first picked up. After a few moments of vigorous work she slowly began to revive, much to the relief of her nurses. The usual question "Where am I?" was asked by Miss Ayres as soon as she had recovered consciousness sufficiently to become aware of what was going on about her.

"I have not the faintest memory," she went on, "of anything that happened after I heard the first strains of the voluntary."—Atlanta Constitution.

Photographing Under Water.

The progress of photography under the sea, by means of the newly devised magnesium light—a marvel of ingenuity—may justly be described as something wonderful, though the timing of the exposure is said to still present one of the most serious difficulties yet to be overcome. It is stated with reference to this important point that thus far in the process an exposure of ten minutes at a depth of three to four feet will give good results. At a depth, however, of fifteen to eighteen feet an exposure is said to be required of not less than thirty minutes when the sun is brightest, though even at this depth it becomes necessary to apply a plate of blue glass in front of the lens in order to obtain pictures that are really clear, while in deeper regions photography would, it is declared, be impossible but for this improved device. It not only saves time and trouble, but good pictures, it is said, have been taken during storms and without appreciable light from above.—N. Y. Sun.

A Valuable Discovery.

An Austrian engineer has found that the bark of trees makes a perfect filter for the removal of salt from sea water. Sailors will appreciate this discovery. On shipboard the question of drinking water is most important. The experiments with bark filters have been going on for some time, and now the discovery is made public. The water is sucked from the ocean by a pump into a reservoir, where it is subjected to atmospheric pressure, which forces it through the natural filter of the bark of a tree. The filtered water first appears in small drops and then in streams. It is good for cooking as well as drinking.—Outlook.

NEW FLYING MACHINES.

A Recent Contribution to the Problem of Aerial Locomotion.

The Man of the Future May Do His Travelling by Wing—A Description of Mr. Picher's Device—Practical Difficulties.

Mr. Percy S. Picher, lecturer on marine engineering at Glasgow university, basing his inventions upon that of Herr Lilienthal, has produced two winged creations, and by their aid has taken sundry flights in mid-air. At times he has risen to an altitude of twenty feet, occasionally hovered like him for a space and then descended on the spot he left, while, upon other trials, he has hastened before the breeze for considerable distances ere regaining his feet. Mr. Picher's machines are light structures of wood and steel supporting a vast spread of wing and braced with piano wire. The wings themselves, which are made of balsam—a sort of muslin originally manufactured in India—have an area of one hundred and fifty square feet; and each machine possesses a vertical and horizontal rudder of circular shape, the one cutting the air at right angles. The former, which is rigid, serves to keep the machine's head to wind, while the latter serves an inclination to pitch sideways—a common vice in all kite inventions.

The great difficulty with winged aeronauts is the uncertain quality of the wind, for a steady, unvarying breeze is never to be calculated upon. Indeed, the sudden, unexpected side puff often brought disaster in its train to Mr. Picher until he hit upon a means of circumventing it. He now draws his wing-lifts in with a bend, which renders a flying machine safer and more stable. Speaking generally these experiments in flying or soaring are being made with a view to master the art of aerial balloon and safe landing. Then, when the golden era dawns, when a screw propeller or flapping wings are introduced, and a power discovered to work them, gentlemen like Messrs. Lilienthal and Picher will spring gayly aloft to emulate the carrier or tumbler pigeon, and put a glider round the earth in a morning. May the necessary discoveries in flying or soaring be speedily made. Meantime Mr. Picher on a fresh pair of wings with a sail area of no less than three hundred feet, pursues his plucky experiments at Cardross, in Dumfriesshire, before numerous admirers.

It Required Nerve.

"Fifteen cents a quart; two dollars a basket," shouted a huckster, with the rasping voice peculiar to his class, in the street.

His wagon, which stood at the end of the curb, was loaded down with baskets of peaches about the size of bullets and quite as hard and indigestible in appearance.

"What do you call those?" inquired a passerby.

"I call those peaches," said the peddler, in an injured tone.

"Well," replied the pedestrian, "you've got a good deal of nerve, that's all I have to say."—N. Y. Herald.

GEN. HARDIN SICK.

Is Specially Ill—Removed to Bowling Green Yesterday Afternoon.

His Illness The Result Of Chills.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Oct. 30.—General P. Watt Hardin, democratic nominee for governor, was taken dangerously ill this morning at Morgantown. He arrived at Morgantown last night at 12 o'clock from Glasgow, where he spoke that evening. He had an appointment to speak at Morgantown to-day, but being very sick he left for this city at an early hour this morning by stage, but was taken violently ill while en route, and was forced to stop at Richardsville. Physicians were at once sent from this city and they report that the general is in a very serious condition.

He arrived here to-night and was at once taken to the home of Mr. Charles Lefler, a relative of Mr. Hardin. His ailment is the result of chills.

WOMEN AND WEAPONS.

If They Are to Be Athletic Why Not Be Armed?

In these days, when women ride bicycles into remote wildernesses camp out in mountain fastnesses, and generally take upon themselves the positions formerly occupied by men, the question of whether or not they shall also take upon themselves masculine weapons naturally arises.

Shall Diana carry a revolver? Shall Lucy wear a dagger? Shall women learn the noble art of self-defense, not only in the form of increased muscle, but in the use of weapons?

The millennium has not yet arrived, and therefore watch chains and brooches still tempt the wayfarer kleptomaniac. In other words, the woman wearing articles of more or less value and tramping or riding, apparently unprotected, along a lonely road, may prove a temptation to the tramp with imperfectly developed notions of personal property.

There are also men who are in a constant state of semi-fermentation, and who are dangerous on that account. There are once in a long time dogs as ferocious and as unguarded. Shall women provide themselves with weapons against all these dangers?

It would seem that ordinary common sense and ordinary prudence would prevent a woman from riding in a dangerous region unless she was protected in some way. The case of a young wheelwoman whose escort left her to her own devices when she was attacked by roughs would indicate that the mere presence of a masculine escort is not sufficient. The matter, therefore, resolves itself into the question of whether women shall ride, drive or walk anywhere except in beaten paths, or whether they shall go armed. As the tendency of the times seems to be distinctly towards women's riding, driving and walking wherever they please, it, therefore, seems that weapons will be part of the modern woman's equipment.

There are some compensations, however. A revolver thrust through a belt is not altogether without its picturesque features. Jeweled pistols, firearms of rare metals and the like would open up a vast vista of gifts. Learning to shoot would form a new field of feminine activity. It would also train the eye, the mind and the hand of the woman who learned. To be sure, it might prove a temptation to some fiery tempered woman when she grew angry, and it might be a constant menace to the well-being of the community in the hands of silly young persons who wished to "show off." But all that might be easily arranged by the simple expedient of granting permits to carry firearms only to even-tempered and well-balanced women. Thus the revolver would become in time a badge of honor, and country highways, mad dogs and the like lose all their horrors.—N. Y. World.

"Do you have any luck in your literary work, Willard?"

"Yes, I didn't use to think so, but I do now."

"What has caused you to change your mind?"

"I've been reading over my rejected stuff, and I'm perfectly delighted to think it didn't get printed and over my mind."—Harper's Bazar.

Hopkinsville's Young Authors.

The little book of stories by Miss Florence Frances Brainerd, which was recently put on the market here, is spoken of in words of high commendation by all who have read it. There are three stories, "In a Day of Darkness," "Where Deep Waters Flowed," and "A Bitter Lesson." The two first are novelettes of fifty or more pages, and "A Bitter Lesson" is a short story. They are all written in a charming style, entirely free from affectation and bombast, common errors that young authors fall into. Her descriptions are well executed and not overdone. Her characters are well drawn and the plots admirably developed. On the whole the stories are interesting in their subject matter, pure in conception and delineated in well chosen words. We regard the young author as a girl of unusual talent—for she is still little more than a child—and the people of Hopkinsville, when they consider that she is dependent upon her pen for a livelihood, should encourage and aid her by helping her to dispose of the entire edition of her meritorious little book. It sells at 50c at the book stores, or may be ordered by mail.

RELIC OF GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Striking Letter from the Commander on Army Resignation.

Mrs. John S. Brown, the wife of Vice President Brown, of the First national bank of Crawfordville, has a relic which is not for sale, but which is an autograph letter of Gen. George Washington. The letter, says the Indianapolis News, was found many years ago among the papers of Maj. Beall, of Virginia, the great-grandfather of Mr. Brown, and it has been treasured as a precious heirloom ever since. Maj. Beall was in the continental army, and after the war was written to him upon his resignation from the service, after the terrible winter at Valley Forge. The letter is still in good condition, having been carefully framed, and is one of the few autograph letters of Washington extant. It has the characteristic signature, abounding in flourishes, but the balance of the letter is written in a comparatively plain hand. The letter reads as follows:

"Headquarters, 21st March, 1778. Sir: I have received your letter of this date inclosing your commission. The frequency of resignation throughout the army is truly alarming. If, however, in the Virginia line this spirit unhappily seems to rage like an epidemic disease, I am at a loss to account how gentlemen can recollect such a mode of desertion of the public interest at this crisis of our affairs, either with the principles of honor or duty to themselves and their country. If, however, you think yourself warranted and are determined to quit the army I must at least insist upon your retaining your commission till the arrival of more officers in camp. I am, sir, your most Obedt. Servt., G. Washington."

The straightforward letter of the great commander so affected Maj. Beall that he continued in the service, and was instrumental in bringing about the recall of a number of other resignations.

APPRECIATE THEIR EFFORTS.

Reasons Given by a Man Who Listens to All Sides.

A man who makes a practice of giving alms to almost every beggar that accosts him on the street has a unique explanation for his action, says the Washington Post.

"Street begging is the hardest work in the world," he says. "Supposing seventy-five per cent. of all the beggars in the business to be impostors, what do you observe? A woman crouching all day over a hot tongs, wringing for pennies that are dropped into her tin receptacle; men standing in the by-ways and on dark street corners in the cold without an overcoat, waiting for you pass to give them a dime to buy a cup of coffee with. (Suppose they make a dollar a day that way.) If you think that's a comfortable business, just try it for an experiment. Don't take any reckoning of the hard things that are said to them. Pride soon becomes caloused under such a strain, but just look at it from the standpoint of the amount of hard work involved and the discomforts from cold and exposure. You'll soon come to the conclusion that almost any kind of manual labor is lighter than street begging; and for that reason I never inquire whether a beggar is deserving or not. If he takes to the business as a matter of choice he deserves all he can get."

"But suppose every man should take your view of it? Begging would become the most profitable business that one could engage in."

"Ah!" said the philosopher, "but how many men take the trouble to think of it? The discovery is made."

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

The Young Man Who is to Wed Consuelo Vanderbilt.

What He Drinks, Eats, Smokes and Thinks and the War He Looks, Acts and Wears His Clothes—Not an Impassioned Personage.

Perhaps you have never seen the duke of Marlborough. It is quite likely that you haven't. He is, according to the New York World, a very exclusive gentleman—stops at exclusive hotels, associates with exclusive people. He is, you know, the young man who is to marry a girl who will well something like $15,000,000 when she is married; later on in life she will have about $25,000,000 if she survives her parents.

If you were to see his lordship the duke, you would be disappointed. Somehow or other the mind's eye conjures up a vision of a deep-chested, stonemason, heavy and oftentimes handsome fellow when an Englishman is mentioned. That is not so of the duke. Englishmen are not always handsome and muscular any more than Americans are. And the vast majority of Englishmen of the noble birth are anything but athletic in build. Nature did not want the ninth duke of Marlborough very kindly in the matter of physical proportions. He is very short of stature and some people say of money also. He isn't more than 5 feet and 5 inches in height.

In the matter of weight it is about an even thing between his lordship and his affianced. He weighs about 120 pounds. His chest is hollow, and for that reason he is lacking in lung power. Being somewhat short of wind, as of other things, he speaks in almost a whisper, and sometimes he is almost inaudible in his speech. Servants are very frequently put to the embarrassing necessity of exclaiming: "Pardon your lordship's pardon," thus indicating that they desire the question or the command repeated.

Being short of stature, it is not at all likely that the duke could look one over his shoulder if he were to wear American made clothing. That would at least outline his figure and its symmetry or the lack of it. But his clothes are of course of foreign make. He is no credit to his tailor. Perhaps his tailor is a credit to him. He looks as though he had been thrown into his clothing. His coats are several sizes too large for him. So are his trousers. The suit, of course, the fault of his tailor. But it mums the appearance of the duke. The only redeeming feature of his garb is his masterful. That is usually of Scotch tweed or English worsted. Those are very nice materials.

In the matter of dress the duke quite up to date. For ordinary attire he wears a shirt of a delicate shade of pink or pink or lavender. He is, or was, rather inclined to sacrifice style to comfort during the warm days. He often appears in the lobby of the Waldorf where he makes his home, in a negligee shirt, with collar attached. His cuffs were quite large. In the matter of neckties, there is not so much to be said in his favor. His cravats would look very chic on a small boy in a Fauntleroy suit, but they are too young for the duke. His red scarf is not that rich red called bull's-blood by the haberdashers, but it is more like a rainbow hue of pink. His blue scarf is not the blond steel blue nor the robin's egg blue, either of which would be appropriate to his blond complexion. It is a baby blue. It doesn't look well. Bootmakers say that long narrow foot on a man is an evidence of gentle birth and refinement. The duke's foot is long and narrow, but his shoes are not pointed to such an alarming and absurd extent as they might be without transgressing the rules of fashion.

His hats are queer. His derby is very low in the crown, and the brim is not wide enough to distinguish the reason's idea of what is the proper thing in headgear. But it suits the duke, and several of the uptown chaplains are wearing the same style of derby. They couldn't wait to have the hats imported. But an American hatmaker who dictates the fashion on this side sent a designer from his shop to get his eagle eye on the lines of the duke's hat, and straightway the designer made a block just like it. There were some hats made from the block.

The duke smokes cigarettes, sometimes cigars. They are always mild. Imported, of course. He pays twenty-five cents for each cigar. He only buys one at a time, which leaves one to infer that he is not a heavy smoker, and, furthermore, that he has not the habit of sticking his hand into his waistcoat pocket and drawing out a cigar to offer to a friend.

When the duke is thirsty he drinks champagne. He is very fond of that beverage as a stimulant. He keeps a polish of a bottle—a pint, of course—in a very artistic manner. He doesn't like the plebeian American drinks. He never tastes the American brew, but once. Then he didn't like it. Nor

FRANCISCO SCHLADER.

A New "Divine Healer" with Thousands of Faithful Followers.

Francisco Schlader, the healer, called by many "the Messiah," who has been creating so much excitement in Denver, claims that he has been ordered to Chicago, and that he will appear in that city November 10 to divide with Brother Dowie the notoriety that will result from divine healing.

Schlader, footsore, lame and weary, wandered into Denver from across the mountains and desert wastes between southern California and Mexico, from one or the other of which he is supposed to have journeyed.

He is a man about six feet tall, of German extraction, and heavily built. He is possessed of wonderful powers of endurance, for he tramped across the terrible Mojave desert in southern California, bare-headed and without food, for forty days, the time consumed in making his trip over the desert.

He holds receptions in the parlors of Ackerman Fox's residence at Denver every day from nine o'clock in the morning until four in the evening, stopping only an hour for dinner. From three thousand to five thousand people come to him every day to be cured of their diseases by the laying on of his hands, which he does while murmuring a short prayer, with eyes uplifted in a most devout and solemn manner. He makes no claim whatever to being anything other than a man, who has the power to heal, but he does not make any charge for his services. The crowds gather at his residence from all parts of the state, and remain from sunrise in the morning until after dark at night, all anxious to receive the healing touch. He says he does not know what this mysterious power he possesses is at all, but he feels it to be his duty to do what he can for his fellow men, and he therefore does it. He preaches no sermons, and is as sincere and innocent as a child.

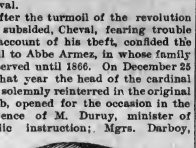

He is not regarded as a false, but is treated with the utmost consideration by the press and public, who respect him for his simplicity of life, sincerity of purpose, and meekness of manner. He is instilling new life and hope into thousands by his magnetic thrill, and is receiving credit from all over the United States, but claims he must keep his engagement in Chicago.

SKULL OF RICHELIEU.

Recently Brought to Light from Its Resting Place in Paris.

Among the relics which were violated during the French revolution was that of Richelieu, in the Church of the Sorbonne. The rest of the remains of the famous cardinal were scattered to the four winds, but the head was recovered and was concealed by a hat named Cheval.

After the turmoil of the revolution had subsided, Cheval, fearing trouble on account of his theft, confided the skull to Abbe Arnez, in whose family he served until 1866. On December 25 of that year the head of the cardinal was solemnly reinterred in the original tomb, opened for the occasion in the presence of M. Duruy, minister of public instruction; Mgrs. Darboy,

HEAD OF CARDINAL RICHELIEU.

Maréchal Perrand; and of M. Maurice Cottier, member of the upper council of the fine arts, who made the sketch of the skull herewith reproduced from L'Illustration.

"The University and the Academy," said M. Duruy on this occasion, "performed a filial duty in joining their homage to the foot of this tomb, which will never again be disturbed."

M. Duruy was mistaken. The tomb of Richelieu has again been disturbed. It was opened in the presence of the French minister of foreign affairs, M. Hanotaux, historian of the cardinal, and the architect of the Sorbonne, M. Niox. This exhumation was deemed necessary by the work now in progress on the old church.

Of the head of Richelieu the face alone survives. The occiput has disappeared. The expression of the countenance is striking, for the classical type of the great cardinal is there in admirable preservation.

Only one thing could occasion doubt of its authenticity—namely, the absence of that famous chin beard of which literary speaks and which all the painters have depicted.

But even this deficiency may, on the contrary, be taken as proof of genuineness, for in the painting of Philip de Champaigne, representing Richelieu on his deathbed, the dying man wears neither beard nor moustache.

IS TROUBLED WITH RHEUMATISM READ THIS

Annapolis, Md., April 16, 1891.—I have used Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism and found it to be all that is claimed for it. I believe it to be all that is claimed for it. I believe it to be the best remedy for rheumatism and deep seated muscular pains on the market and cheerfully recommend it to the public. Jno. G. Brooks, dealer in boots, shoes, etc., No. 18, Main street.

Mechanicsville, St. Mary county, Md.—I sold a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm to a man who had been suffering with rheumatism for several years. It made him a well man. A. J. McGuff. For sale at 60 cents per bottle by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

With two little children subject to croup we no rest easy without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, for the most severe attacks quickly succumb to its doses of it.—Morrison, Colo., Brn. For sale at 25 and 50c per bottle by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

It will surely rain if moles cast up hills.

If your children are subject to croup watch for the first symptom of the disease—hoarseness. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse it will prevent the attack. Even after the croupy cough has appeared the attack can always be prevented by giving this remedy. It is also invaluable for colds and whooping cough. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

The more snow the healthier the season.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine: "We know from experience that Chamberlain's Cholera, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pain, and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy one night without it in the house. This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine we keep in the house. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, druggist.

AMERICAN WRITERS LACKING.

Complaint That Good Work is in Demand While the quality is poor.
There is no lack of demand for good American fiction. With all due respect to the galaxy of bright writers in Great Britain who have achieved a prominence here during the last few years, it is, nevertheless, a fact that publishers are looking eagerly for novels and novelettes dealing with American people and scenes. Sold one of them to the Literary World the other day: "We have been publishing English and Scotch stories simply because we could not procure American fiction of corresponding worth. It is needless to say that there is a far greater demand for American novels than for those written about Europe and British. But it looks as if we could not succeed in our endeavor. We do not lack a novel, for instance, that is dashed off, three or four chapters at a time, by a woman after she has given an afternoon tea before dressing for the evening. But we want American novels written by men and women whose brains surge and swell while they are at work. And I see no hope of our looking for them in the newspaper offices."

The publisher does not understand the conditions of newspaper work. He does not know that a writer, no matter how good, or how he might be hopeful. There are young men and young women scattered through newspaper offices here and there who are capable of developing into novelists; but they have no chance, while on morning papers, at least. The average reporter goes to work at noon, and then sits until, or an hour later, he or she is hastening from one point to another, oftentimes unable to get regularly or to secure sufficient sleep. Leaving entirely after noon assignment is covered and the "story" written the reporter has a chance to breathe sometimes; and then when he reaches the office with his evening assignment covered, provided he has but one, he sits down and writes when too often he is greatly fatigued. At midnight, however, or two hours before the morning, he goes home. It is reasonable to expect a man or a woman after such a sleep to write fiction? How can it be done? The reporter's very existence, with its hurry and rush and exhausting physical labor, makes it very doubtful if we can look to him as a class from whom to expect fiction. With men and women on evening papers the case is different. They have more leisure, in the evenings, at least; but the fact remains that a man writing the brightest men and women prefer morning papers, because they pay so much more.

Dead Right.

AUNT SUSAN RETIRES.

Miss Anthony to Devote the Remainder of Her Days to Rest.

Word comes from Rochester, N. Y., the home of Susan B. Anthony, that the famous woman suffrage advocate has determined to pass the remainder of her days quietly at that place. Miss Anthony's health is excellent this fall notwithstanding rumors to the contrary since the fainting spells with which she was afflicted last summer. But it is not likely that she will ever again engage in protracted effort in behalf of the suffrage, or any other cause. She is well along in years and understands that she cannot do better than to give the younger women of the movement a chance. In all probability, therefore, she will remain quietly in Rochester for the remainder of her life. To her friends she says she is quite resigned, but there is no doubt whatever that she fully expected the constitutional convention of 1894 to give the vote to herself and her sisters.

Miss Anthony's home is a pretty brick house standing a little back from the street in a small grass plot, and is shaded by graceful maples. With her lives her sister Mary. She, like Susan B., has never married. "Aunt Mary," as she is known to her intimates, has the most profound respect and affection for her sister, and has practically effaced herself all her life in order that Susan might round out her career. Until a few years ago Mary Anthony was a teacher in one of the public schools. She is nearly as old as Susan, and for thirty years, at least, she gave most of her working hours to the training of juvenile minds and ministering to her sister's comfort or helping her prepare addresses and papers for publication. Yet she managed always to keep abreast of the times and to familiarize herself with the latest books. She has done a good deal of speech-making at home, mostly before the Ignorance club, of which both Susan and herself are members, and those who have heard her say she is a good speaker as is Susan. Besides she is an excellent housekeeper, but in this she cannot excel "Aunt Susan." Still, all her friends declare, would have made an ideal housewife. In fact, there are many women here who declare "Aunt Susan's" bread to be the lightest, whitest and sweetest they have ever tasted.

FOND OF RATTLES.

A Little Dakota Girl and Her Collection of Venomous Snakes.

The librarian of congress at Washington has recently received from an artist at Hot Springs, S. D., a photograph of Martha McIntire, an eight-year-old child, who from her infancy has had rattlesnakes for pets. When she was four years old she found a huge rattler coiled up in the yard near her father's house, and by some mysterious power was able to come close and take hold of him, which she did apparently without the slightest fear. Every month or so she would find a new snake in the woods near the house, and now she has as many as two dozen, none of which can be induced to leave her. The photograph shows her pets writhing on some slats nailed to two boards, while Martha stands behind them, her hand on one of the reptiles, which is moving from side to side. Some of these snakes are four feet long.

New Cure for Snake Bites.

Prof. Halford, of Melbourne, Australia, has been making a most remarkable series of experiments with chloride of lime, with respect to its action upon human subjects as a cure or preventive of the evil effects of snake bites. He is sending answers of inquiry to the United States, and has resulted in the discovery of a river which Dr. Bell describes as the "Nile of the north," and the sixth largest river in the world. Its average width is a mile, and it is five hundred miles long. It has three tributaries, one rising north of Three Rivers, another in the Lake St. John region, and the third near Lake Mistassini. A primitive forest skirts the river's brink the whole distance, which is navigable from the rapids to the north.

EDITOR AND STATESMAN.

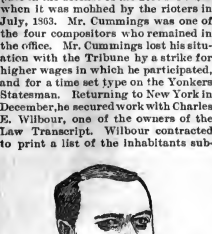

The Eventful Career of Hon. Amos J. Cummings.

Voted a Congressional Medal for bravery at Fredericksburg—His Influence in the Newspaper Field of New York City.

Hon. Amos J. Cummings, who is now a candidate for congress from the Tenth New York district, was born in Conklingville, Broome county, N. Y., on May 15, 1841. His father and grandfather were clergymen of the Christian church. He was given a common school education in his native town, and at the age of twelve, when his father was editor of the Christian Palladium and the Christian Messenger, he entered his father's printing office as an apprentice in the composing room. Then came a period of four years, during which he left home and hoed his own row as a compositor for many years and southern states. In 1857, while in Mobile, he joined the famous Walker expedition, which wound up with his capture, along with several hundred others, by the United States troops of war St. Mary's.

After his release he came to New York city and enjoyed his first taste of metropolitan journalism, in which he afterward became so distinguished by working at the case in the Tribune office. He remained in the Tribune composing room until the call of the trumpet to war, when he laid aside, for a time, the "stick," and took up the sword.

In the war he was sergeant major of the Twenty-sixth New Jersey volunteer regiment, participated in many battles, and was officially mentioned for gallantry at Fredericksburg, and received the congressional medal of honor by order of the secretary of war. He returned from the war in time to participate in the defense of the Tribune office when it was mobbed by the rioters in July, 1863. Mr. Cummings was one of the four compositors who remained in the office. Mr. Cummings lost his situation with the Tribune by a strike for higher wages in which he participated, and was for a time typewriter at the Young Statesman. Returning to New York in December, he secured work with Charles E. Wilbur, one of the owners of the four compositors who remained in the office. Mr. Cummings took it upon him to print a list of the inhabitants subjects to the draft, and Cummings worked upon the list until he was offered a position in the editorial room of the Tribune.

Just after Christmas, in 1864, he was placed in charge of the Weekly Tribune. After serving nearly two years on the weekly he became night editor, and afterward city editor and political editor of the daily edition of the Tribune. He has charge of the political department of the paper during the first Grand campaign. In 1869 he became managing editor of the Sun, and remained there until the winter of 1872. Broken down in health by overwork, he went to Florida. In the following summer he visited Colorado, Utah, Nebraska and California, sending correspondence to the Sun over the signature of "Ziska," which attracted much attention. Mr. Cummings returned to New York in the spring of 1876, and his Florida letters reached a world-wide circulation. He visited the Everglades, Lake Okechobee and other parts of the state, then but little known.

In the spring of 1876 he returned to New York and took charge of the New York Evening Express. He remained there until after the nomination of Mr. Tilden. In 1884 Mr. Cummings was elected president of the New York Press club. He accepted a reelection, and declined a third nomination. In the fall of 1886 he was elected to congress. On March 17 following he became the editor of the Evening Sun. Here he remained until the opening of congress in December. The Evening Sun under his administration became one of the leading evening newspapers of New York.

He declined a renomination for congress in 1888, but in the fall of 1889 was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of "Sunset" Cox, and was re-elected to fill the same office in 1890. In congress Mr. Cummings has been an active supporter of all measures brought before the house in the interest of labor.

Discovery of a Great River.

The expedition of Dr. Bell, of the geographical survey, undertaken last June into the fastnesses of British America by a route directly north from the St. Lawrence, has resulted in the discovery of a river which Dr. Bell describes as the "Nile of the north," and the sixth largest river in the world. Its average width is a mile, and it is five hundred miles long. It has three tributaries, one rising north of Three Rivers, another in the Lake St. John region, and the third near Lake Mistassini. A primitive forest skirts the river's brink the whole distance, which is navigable from the rapids to the north.

Over Seven Miles Up.

The highest peak ever obtained by man was that reached by Cox and Gishner, in 1843, 37,000 feet above the sea.

It will surely ruin if moles cast up hills.

Bearded frost is a forerunner of snow.

The more snow the healthier the season.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by no means promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.
